

Brief Union Council 2021-3

By Wilma Hallén, based on a brief from Lex Jakobsson and Robin Hugemark, NVM

The council gathered to decide on the budget and the different plans of business that the union will work towards this coming year. After spending some time on reports from the elected representatives, the meeting went on to decide on one motion and seven propositions. The motion was to change the number of deputy Union Council members that the smaller sections can appoint, the same motion that was passed on the previous meeting. The motion needed to be voted through twice, on two separate Union Council meetings, since it involved a change in the byelaws.

Many of the propositions regarded the end of the financial year, such as the activity plan and budget for the following year, as well as updates in the union's investing and maintenance plan. There was another proposition regarding the new position description for the union magazine Techna. All the propositions went through after some editing.

At the end of the second day, three elections were held: the first was for internal auditor, congratulations Annie Paulsson (NVB), the second election was for board members, congratulations Erik Victorin (E), Julia Sundmark (K) and Pelle Ingvast (I). The third and final election was for the deputy secretary of the Union Council, a position that is still vacant!

The most notable is without a doubt the question posed by a council member to all candidates: How many five-year olds could you wrestle down before they took you down? The answers varied between "I would run away" to "23" to "I would just lie down immediately."

See you all on FUM 2021:4 in September, and I hope you have a nice summer!
